Yale Plans to Drop Secret Football Drill

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 6 .-Secret practice for the Yale football squad this fall will probably be abolished, with the exception of a short period just before the Princeton and Harvard games. Head Coach T. A. D. Jones is understood to be opposed to having the "closed gate" system all season, as prevailed last year. Captain Malcolm Aldrich has announced his desiree for open daily practice, which is expected to stimulate interest by the student body in the team and promote better attendance at the early season games.

In the women's metropolitan championship tournament at Glen Cove on the content of the content of Americans might have won out. At the ninth hole Barnes had a chance for a win, but the ball, after rolling half-way into the tin, bounced out again. George McLean was the hero of the morning round. Playing in top form, he had the best ball for his side, the Pelham Prince being slightly off his game. But McLean's 71 wasn't good enough to hold in check the Britons, who were teaming well. Their best ball card of 67 sufficed to leave them three holes to the good at the end of the round.

Barnes Comes to Life

Barnes Comes to Life

Barnes came to life in the afternoon, but on this round it was the Grassy Sprain star himself who slipped, so that Long Jim had to go it alone practically. Still he played well enough so that with the help he did get from his partner he was able to cut the lead of his opponents to one. However, the advantage Duncan and Mitchell had earned on the first round proved too much to overcome.
